

GLOBAL INVESTORS - Point Capital Navigator Fund A

Data as of 30 January 2026 - Marketing Communication

Description

The funds investment objective is to produce consistently superior performance as regards its growth profile with a moderate level of volatility through the use of fundamental, quantitative and technical analysis. To this end, the manager may enter into full or partial positions in asset classes, regions, sectors and individual securities that are different from standard indices. The goal is not to replicate general market movements, but rather to avoid the segments which are considered overvalued and enter into positions in segments considered to have more potential. As a result, the respective weightings within an index will be of little importance. The subfund is actively managed without reference to a benchmark.

Monthly comment

The month of December was a very positive one for precious metals and to a lesser extent equities. Due to concerns about the sustainability and profitability of AI Capex going forward, performance was better for equities other than the «magnificent seven» and it appears that this trend is set to continue into 2026. The FED delivered another 25 bps cut which was as expected. However, they unexpectedly announced a $40 billion per month treasury bills purchase which is supportive of liquidity and is positive for equity markets as a result. Precious metals had a very positive December after a period of consolidation in November and rallied very strongly till the last few days of the year. There was some profit taking in the final trading days of 2025 as concerns arose about the speed and strength of the rally and margin requirements were raised twice to dissuade leveraged speculators. We continued to book profits and are slightly underweight compared to our average exposure of 10 % held for most of the past two years. The fund performed well in 2025 as we were able to navigate through the volatility and make use of the opportunities it presented, especially at the individual equity level.
